

GUIDE TO ASSESSING WEB PAGES

Check the following to consider whether a web page provides reliable information:

- Does the site represent a reputable organisation or individual? Is there contact information? (Remember the Web address or URL can give you information about these details.)
- Is the author's name, qualifications and experience included?
- Is there bias? Is the author presenting a particular point of view? What is the author aiming to achieve?
- Can other sources of information be found that verify the information?
- Is the information verified by references, a bibliography, or links to other reputable sites?
- How recently has the site been updated?

Printer friendly form for assessing web pages on SEQTA

Resource Centre staff are always keen to help. Ask, if you need assistance with the Internet or any other information sources.